Most Americans don't understand sequester. We need to be more clever than the Left on this...

Something amusing and easy for LIVs to understand.

Maybe a tie in to Humpty Dumpty (the economy) and all King Obama's men ("tax increases") not being able to put Humpty Dumpty back together again.

(I'm open to anything...and just made that up...)

This week, the Campaign for America's Future launched a grassroots action campaign calling on Congress to "Disarm the Austerity Bomb" and repeal the "sequester" – automatic, across-the-board spending cuts now estimated to kill 1 million jobs.

The grassroots response has been unequivocal: disarm the austerity bomb. But Republicans are threatening to let deep cuts take place, and President Obama is calling for a postponement paid for by smaller cuts.

This is an outrage. Tax hikes from the fiscal cliff negotiation are just starting to hit. The economy already contracted last quarter. If we don't repeal the sequester, we could drive this economy back into recession.

We need as much firepower as possible to break through the debate in Washington. We need your help.

The sequester kicks in on March 1, so there's no time to waste. Please contribute to our Disarm the Austerity Bomb campaign today.

To be heard over the billionaire-funded propaganda ginning up another phony debt crisis, we need to get the facts out. We'll use your help to distribute talking points to Congress. We'll advance a full-court press blitz, engaging reporters, bloggers, columnists and pundits in making the case. And the case is clear:

- * The deficit as a percentage of the economy is already down by almost half since 2009, and is falling faster than at any time since demobilization after World War II.
- * More than 20 million people are still in need of full-time work. Wages are falling and insecurity is rising.
- * The economy declined in the fourth quarter of 2012, and spending cuts and tax hikes already passed will impede 2013 growth.

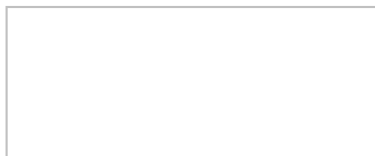

We don't have a deficit crisis. We have a jobs crisis. More cuts will only make it worse.

With your help, we'll get that message out. Contribute to our Disarm the Austerity Bomb campaign today.

Let's call the Tea Party Republicans on their hostage-taking. Repeal the sequester. Disarm the austerity bomb.
